

New York State's Regional Volunteer Centers

New York State is working with Regional Volunteer centers to achieve the following primary objectives during the next three-years:

- Develop and expand a sustainable network of national and community service agencies that will provide services and resources to communities throughout New York State;
- Engage one million New Yorkers in active service in order to increase New York's volunteer rate to the current national average and help address our State's most pressing needs;
- Deliver volunteer management training that will strengthen the capacity of non-profit agencies statewide and more strategically engage national service programs and volunteer resources as a solution to critical local problems; and
- Elevate the State Commission's capacity to implement its objectives statewide, capture regional and local volunteer statistics to full analyze the service landscape in New York, and increase the overall impact of skill-based volunteers to meet community needs.
